1751. Jan. 9. FALCONER against ARBUTHNOT and Others.

Several bonds granted by the Lady Phesdo to Arbuthnot of Fordoun and others her grandchildren, having her subscription adhibited to them, after she was so blind with age that she could not see to subscribe, and where it was proved that Fordoun led her hand when she adhibited her subscription, were upon that ground reduced; notwithstanding the deeds appeared rational, and that some evidence was brought of her previous intention to give some donations to her grandchildren.

At pronouncing this interlocutor, the Lords were nowise moved by the arguments brought by the pursuer to prove an imposition, but they thought there was the utmost danger in sustaining deeds in those circumstances. They also thought that L. 8. C. Qui test. facere possunt, was founded on solid principles; that therefore a person blind, or so blind as the Lady was, could not legally sign but by notaries, and that a publication of her will coram tabellione et testibus was necessary, for the reason given in fine, D. I. 8. That whatever reasons there might be to think there was no imposition in this case, yet the law suspected and even presumed it. That farther, one's subscribing, by having his hand led, is illegal, dangerous to sustain in any case, especially so in this.

1752. December 7. STEPHEN BROOMFIELD against JOHN YOUNG.

In an action for implement of a minute of tack pursued by Broomfield; Young the tenant objected, that the minute was null, for that it did not bear that the marginal notes had been signed before witnesses; the words of the testing clause being, "Before these witness, Robert Brown tenant [in] Ednam, and John Fish of Castlelaw, writer hereof, and witness to the marginal notes also." Now, since "writer hereof, and witness to the marginal notes also," cannot be applied to Brown, Fish must, in all propriety of speech, be held to be the single witness to the subscription of the marginal notes; which therefore can bear no faith in judgment; and consequently that mutual contract, whereof they are a part, must also be null.

Answered for Broomfield: The writer of the deed imagined that the word witness might be used in the plural number, as appears from the testing clause above recited; and this explication being once admitted, the marginal notes will seem properly attested.
